Resignation of Supply Nation's CEO

Date of release 1 February 2023

Jodie Taylor has announced her resignation as Chief Executive Officer of Supply Nation.

Ms Taylor said she was incredibly proud of her role in driving opportunities for the Indigenous business sector over the past three years, and working with the exceptional team at Supply Nation.

"I'd like to thank the Supply Nation Board for appointing me to the CEO position in 2022, and it has been a privilege leading the organisation through a period of transformational growth. I look forward to continuing my advocacy work and strengthening Indigenous engagement across the corporate and government landscapes."

The Supply Nation Board acknowledges the contribution Ms Taylor has made to the organisation, and wishes her well with her future endeavours.

The Supply Nation Board has appointed Michelle Deshong as the interim CEO.
